The Desperate Democracy.

From the National Intelligencer of Friday

Since the result of the October elections was ascertained we have been overwhelmed with interrogatories by our friends in almost every part of the country asking us "What shall we do to be saved?"

We deemed it our duty to respond frankly.—It would be a base betrayal of the trust reposed in us if we should attempt to deceive those who look confidently to us for the truth, and by holding out false promises lead them on to a cheerless and disastrous defeat, merely to show our courage and try their pluck.

It is unnecessary for us to say here—for the whole country knows—that, from the first to the last, none have been more earnest, none have been more indefatigable, none have struck stouter blows against the Radical usurpationists, and in defense of the common cause of the Democrats and Conservatives, than ourselves. We have not, we do not intend to give up the fight. We, too, shall fight on to the end against the excesses of the Radical power and in behalf of the Conservative masses of our countrymen; but when solemnly appealed to by them to know "what shall we do to be saved," we cannot, dare not, will not deliberately lie to them, and tell them that all is well, when we are convinced that all is not well. We cannot promise them a victory where all foresees defeat, but in this emergency, in common with a number of the most respectable Democratic and Conservative journals in various parts of the country, moved, as it would seem, by a simultaneous inspiration; and in common also with very many of the best, bravest, most sagacious, devoted, unswervering, and life long Democrats, we advise a course of action which we believe, if adopted, would have insured the success of the Democrats and Conservatives, and the overwhelming defeat of the Radicals in the Presidential election.

These counsels were unheeded by those who alone were, unfortunately for the country, in position, to give them practical effect, but all is not yet lost. There is still a way by which the battle may be won, and our enemies discomfited. The Conservative reserves, the need of whose co operation has been too abundantly demonstrated, may yet be brought to our support in time to achieve a glorious victory, or to avoid a disastrous defeat. If the National Executive Committee will act promptly, or, in the absence of any action immediately on the part of the National Executive Committee, if the State Central Committees of the Democratic and Conservative party in each State, for themselves, shall at once adopt a resolution announcing that the Electors of the Democratic and Conservative party will, in the meeting of the Electoral College, recognize and be guided by the popular demand and vote for such candidates as they believe will be most acceptable to the whole Conservative people, many of the States now doubtful, and even many in which there is at present but a faint hope of defeating the Radicals, may yet be saved. This expedient is suggested as one in the hands of the people themselves—one which they can control without awaiting the tardy and reluctant action, or the perverse non action of the National Committee. Thus, some of the doubtful States may yet be secured. Every one thus gained in opposition to Radicalism will go so far towards throwing the Radicals into a minority in the Electoral College, and securing the choice of a Conservative President.

The California Earthquake.

The New York Herald of Saturday contains a long account of the calamity in California from its San Francisco correspondent, from which we extract the following

The casualties are light, because of the time when the shock occurred. Had it been an hour later they would have been very heavy. Falling cornices and chimneys did the work principally. Many of the casualties occurred from frantic efforts to get out of building. Some persons jumped out of the second story windows. The panic at the time was terrible. The streets were filled with people in every conceivable costume and some almost with costume. I was in a frame house on the hill, and although the vibration was heavier than any I ever felt in South America, yet from the character of the structure it sustained no damage worth speaking of. The shock must have been heavier down town, for the condition of the walls show that the force exerted to put them in their present condition is almost beyond comprehension. It is conceded on all sides that a few seconds more would have destroyed that portion of the city not constructed on solid foundations. Fortunately the hotels escaped serious injury; for, crowded as they were, had they been less strong, the result would have been terrible. The inmates were much shaken up, and many have sought the shelter of frame buildings, now conceded to be the safest.

Animals of all kinds felt the shock; horses became wild with terror and some where thrown down by the motion of the earth, while others snorted and ran away. Dogs were barking and running through the streets, apparently not knowing what they were doing. Birds even noticed the great convulsion of nature. During all of yesterday the excitement was intense. The streets were crowded with people, the majority of stores and other places of business were closed. But few persons would enter buildings, and these would stampede into the streets with a rush whenever a slight vibration indicated that the earth was not yet settled. The earthquake took precedence over everything, business being for the time forgotten, and all looked as if another might came that would swallow the city; yet with all this fear the people tried to look cheerful as they told their experience and related their hairbreadth escapes. The earthquake of yesterday was heavier than it was three years ago, and they keep getting stronger.

Another much heavier shock than yesterday's will tell a tale such as I do not wish to record. This vicinity appears to have been about the center of the convulsion, south and east. It was heavy, but north it was lighter. In Oakland much damage was done; at San Leandro also and other towns south of us everything like brick or masonry suffered, while framework stood well. Persons in the country noticed an upheaving and opening of the earth in several places. Large masses of rock, several tons in weight, were detached and rolled down the hill and mountain sides. Trees were violently shaken, and water made its appearance where all was dry before. From some streams bubbles containing inflammable gas has risen to the surface.

The motion of the shock was well marked as being southeast one and southwest one, although the conditions of some buildings indicates a rotary motion from the manner in which they are wrung and twisted. They are open on all sides. In forty two seconds we had ample opportunity to note the vibrations and know that they were as stated. The shock commenced heavily and gained in strength, and stopped suddenly, not tapering off. I thought it never would end, and every moment I expected the ceiling would come down. To those in upper stories of high brick buildings the scene was appalling. An estimate upon the amount of damage done is based on the cost of putting up buildings as they were before the convulsion took place, not the expense of filling up cracks and plastering them over. I do not believe there is a structure in the city but what is more or less strained. They appear all right now, but another earthquake will prove if I am right.

A dispatch from San Francisco on Saturday afternoon gives the following additional particulars: From the interior we learn that Alameda county suffered most by the earthquake. Fissures in the earth were made from which issued clouds of dust and volumes of water. Creeks dry for several months suddenly became large streams. Hot water and steam also issued from the earth. The villages of San Leandro and Hayward are almost in ruins. The brick buildings were all thrown down and hundreds of tenements left uninhabitable. The towns of Alameda, Brooklyn and Oakland suffered severely; also San Jose and Redwood City. The brick buildings in the old mission of San Jose are a mass of ruins. Sacramento, Stockton and Marysville suffered slightly. The damage in Petaluma, Healdsbury, Santa Rosa valley and Martinez were considerable. The shock extended south to Los Angelos, but was light there and in all the surrounding country. Our city hall has been condemned and will be demolished. Other city buildings were only slightly injured. The marine hospital on Recon Point is condemned. The custom house building is very badly injured. Large numbers of laborers are at work to day clearing up the rubbish. The total losses will reach the neighborhood of two millions of dollars.

Mesalliances.

[From the Saturday Review

If a youth's mesalliance is a millstone round his neck for life a girl's is simply destruction.—The natural instinct with all women is to marry above themselves; and we know on what physiology is this instinct stands, and what useful social ends it serves. And the natural instinct is as true in its social as in its physiological expression. A woman's honor is in her husband, her status, her social life, are determined by his; and even the few women who having made a bad marriage, have nerve and character enough to set themselves free from the personal association, are never able to thoroughly regain their maiden place.

There is always something about them that clogs and fetters them, always a kind of aura of a doubtful and depressing kind that surrounds and influences them. If they have no strength to free themselves, they never cease to feel the mistake they have made, until the old and process of degeneration is accomplished, and the "grossness of his nature" has had strength to drag her down. After a time, if her ladyhood has been a superficial kind only, a woman who has married beneath herself may ease down into her groove, and be like the man she has married. If, however, she has sufficient force to resist outside influences she will not sink, but she will never cease to suffer. She has sinned against herself, her class, and her natural instincts, and so has done substantially a worse thing than has the boy who married his mother's maid.

Society understands this, and, not unjustly, it harshly punishes the one while it lets the other go scot free, so that the woman who makes a mesalliance suffers on every side, and destroys her life almost as much as the woman who goes wrong. All this is as evident to parents and elders as that the sun shines. They understand the imperative duties of social life, and they know how fleeting the passions of youth are, and how they fade by time and use, and in ignominious conditions, and they feel that their first duty to their children is to prevent a mesalliance which has nothing, and can have nothing but passion for its basis.

But novelists and poets are against the hard, dull dictates of worldly wisdom, and join in the apotheosis of love at any cost—all for love and the world well lost, love in a cottage, with nightingales and honeysuckles as the chief means of paying the rent, Lufusa and her plowman, the princess and the swineherd, &c. And the fathers who stand out against, they rain of their girls who stand out against, they rain of their girls by means of estimable men of inferior condition, and with not enough to live on, are stony-hearted and cruel, while the daughters who take cold poison in the back garden if they cannot compass a secret honeymoon or a open flight, have all their sympathy and none of the censure.

The cruel parent is the favorite whipping boy of poetry and fiction, and yet which is likely to be the better guide—reason or passion? experience or ignorance? calculation or impulse? the maturity which can judge, or the youth that can only feel? There would be no hesitation in any other case than that of love, but the love instinct is generally considered to be superior to every other consideration, and to be obeyed as a divine voice, no matter at what cost or consequence.

The ideal of life, according to some, is founded on early marriages. But men are slower in the final settling of their character than women, and one never knows how a young fellow of twenty or so will turn out. If he is devout now, he may be an infidel at forty; if, under home influences, he is temperate and pure, when these are withdrawn he may become a rake of the fastest kind. His temper, morals, business power, ability to resist temptation, all are as yet incohrite and undefined, nothing is sure; and the girl's fancy that makes him perfect in proportion to his good looks, is a mere instinct determined by chance association.

A girl, too, has more character to come out than she has shown in her girlhood. Though she sets sooner that men, she does not set unalterably, and marriage and maternity bring out the depth of her nature as nothing else can. It is only common sense, then, to marry her to a man whose character is already somewhat formed, rather than to one who is still fluid and floating. It is all very well to talk of fighting the battle of life together, and welding together by time. Many a man has been ruined by these detestable metaphors. The theory—partly true and partly pretty—is good enough in its degree, and, so far as the welding goes, we weld together in almost all things by time.

We wear our shoe till we wear it into shape and it ceases to pinch us; but in the process, we go through a vast deal of pain, and are liable to make corns that will last long after the shoe itself fits easily. We do not advocate the French system of marrying off our girls according to our own ideas of suitableness, and without consulting them; but we not the less think that of all fatal social mistakes, mesalliances are the most fatal, and in the case of women, to be avoided and prevented at any cost short of a broken heart or a premature death. And even death sometimes would be better than the life long misery, the enduring shame and humiliation of certain mesalliances.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

We shall not delay now in constructing our assembly on the basis of our programme, which is known to all. We shall then have succeeded in attaining the political ideal of contemporary Spain, namely, Constitutional monarchy founded upon the most extensive liberal basis compatible with that kind of Government.

Finance Committee

Are requested to meet at the office of F Bates, Esq, this morning at 10 o'clock

The Big Ball!

Mr Kingsland's "big ball" is rapidly approaching completion It is to be wholly covered with canvas and brilliantly illuminated, displaying the names of all the States, as it revolves The ball will be twenty feet in diameter and sixty feet in circumference giving a superficial area of 140 square yards It is the biggest thing yet.

Ulysses Strikes Oil

There will be an illuminated derrick in the procession, twenty feet high Grant has taken considerable stock in this region, and no operator ever had a better "show" There will be some thorough "treating" on Thursday, and undoubtedly a "big strike" next Tuesday

A Union Ship.

Mr George H Benton, an "old salt" of several years experience before the mast, is rigging a ship to "navigate" with the grand procession on Thursday night The facilities afforded for such an enterprise are extremely limited, and the time is short, but it is expected the Union ship will be ready to launch on morrow

Ye Ku-Klux!

Among the arrivals per express yesterday was a mysterious package addressed to "Grand Cyclop, K K K," intended doubtless for the representatives of the Klan who join the procession to morrow night It is understood that both of these and men will appear in their original war paint and winding sheets

The Mammoth Cave!

Among the transparencies in the procession to morrow night will be a representation of the Mammoth Cave, illustrating the sudden defection of the New York Herald on Seymour and Blair The New York Cave is much more Mammoth than that of Kentucky

Secure Your Uniforms.

The Republicans have determined to celebrate, rain or shine Those who have not secured their uniforms, can do so by calling upon Samuel Curry at the Club room to day There will be an extensive demand, and if the present stock is insufficient, the fact must be ascertained to day

Illuminations

We hope the illuminations to morrow night will be general Those having a surplus of candlesticks, obtained for the last occasion, are requested to return them to the club room to day for the accommodation of such as have none Let your light shine!

Hie, for Petroleum Centre!

The Grant and Colfax Club unanimously adopted a resolution to attend the Republican demonstration at Petroleum Centre on Friday evening

Hon Edward J McPherson

We have the pleasure of announcing that Hon Edward J McPherson Clerk of the House of Representatives at Washington will speak at the mass meeting on Thursday evening next

Large Tickets Issued

By resolution of the Club last evening an invitation was extended to the Junior Clubs of Erie to participate in the demonstration on Thursday We look for a numerous delegation

Political Paragraphs

A letter from a staff officer of Gen Grant, who is with the General in Illinois, says that the General is in the enjoyment of good health as are also the other members of the family He further states that all the reports to the contrary notwithstanding the General has not yet selected all the members of his future Cabinet, and all the arrangements to that end that have yet been made, were made by other individuals without consulting General Grant

The New York Tribune says Gov Seymour's face was sealed before but now his sentence is pronounced! Andrew Johnson has come out for him! That is enough to kill the livest man in the country, to say nothing of this lifeless body of death!

The statement published in several eastern papers and dispatches from Washington and New York, that Hon Geo H Pendleton advised or desired a change of the candidates on the Democratic ticket or that he ever wrote or telegraphed on the subject, is authoritatively denied

The Jews' vote is giving the Democracy a peck of trouble One organ declares that in Ohio "twenty thousand Hebrew votes are staid at home by preconcerted arrangement," while another says that all the Jews voted the Radical ticket These papers have been declaring all along that the Jews are all Democrats this year!

The World's old cry, "Hang the Herald," is now changed to a supplication for itself The Democrat is filled with letters from the rural districts, from inveterate Democrats, who are stopping the World and taking the Irrepressible journal edited by Pomeroy

THE THEATRE—Annie Sefton's Troupe performed the popular and highly interesting drama of Griffith Gaunt, or Jealousy to an audience at Corinthian Hall last evening Annie Sefton as "Kate Peyton," acted the part of the injured and loving wife charmingly, and received the hearty applause of the audience Mr J W Keene as Griffith Gaunt he seemed to out do all his past performances and was the recipient of many manifestations of praise Miss Jennie Foster as "Caroline Reter" performed her part to the entire satisfaction of all present

Tonight will be presented the great play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I hereby acknowledge the receipt of $10 000 from D P Chapman, Esq, manager or the Pittsburgh Branch Office of the Ætna Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn, per Mr Henry C Ayres his General Agent being the amount of insurance policy issued by said company Oct 18 1866 to my husband, Mr Russell B Camp, (deceased)

To the Company and Agents I express my most grateful thanks for the spirit of promptness and attention they have exhibited to me in the settlement of the above claim

CLARA M CAMP

TITUSVILLE, Pa, Oct 27, 1868

A DISPATCH was sent by Wallace to the Democrats of Western Pennsylvania claiming a majority of thousands in Philadelphia, upon the strength of which, large amounts of money were wagered, and of course lost The same bogus returns were also telegraphed to Southern rebels, who, having no money to bet, adopted the congenial alternative, and ran up the rebel flag forthwith, salutating it with all the honors This was done at Suffolk, Va, on the 14th and 15th. Mr Wallace's friends there find that their cause is doubly lost.

Y M C A.—Prayer meeting at Good Templar Hall this evening at 5 o'clock All are invited.

Seymour Talks.

Seymour has taken the stump, and has delivered more speeches for the past week than Grant has made in the whole course of his life And yet Grant has uttered more memorable sayings, than almost any American that ever lived They are the watchwords of the party; they are the mottoes on our banners They are words that do honor to his manhood, that denote the truly patriotic citizen, more ambitious for his country than himself, words that reveal how clearly and how faithfully he typifies the real genius of our institutions. "My terms are Unconditional Surrender," "I shall fight it out on this line, if it takes all Summer," "The Policy of the Government should conform to the Will of the People" "Let us have Peace"

Gov Seymour has been accustomed to darken counsel with a multitude of words, for many years But can a sentence be culled from all his set speeches, that can match, either in pregnant meaning, in nobility of sentiment, self forgetfulness, elevation, or patriotism, the expressions we have quoted from Grant?

The office of President is purely Executive, requiring commanding character, and force of will, rather than the arts of advocacy, power of judgment, not ingenuity in arguments lies The Senate Chamber and the Legislative Hall are the field for debate, not the White House To gather wise men around him for Cabinet officers, men wise in finance, in diplomacy, law, and to act when a judgment is arrived at, with firmness and decision, this is the great office of a President properly understood

And what Commander ever exhibited more admirable sagacity in the choice of his leading officers and in the assignment to each his appropriate work than Gen Grant? What General from Cæsar to Washington, ever inspired more confidence, secured more intelligent and cheerful acquiescence, or a more harmonious co operation with his inferiors in military grade and rank than has been exhibited in the personal and official relations that have subsisted between Grant, and Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas, Meade, and Schofield? Could anything else than the most commanding ability, the rarest excellence of private character account for such reverence such devoted attachment as Grant has inspired in all who were brought into intimate fellowship with him in the great crisis through which our country has just passed?

Will any one tell us now who are and are to be the chief friends and counsellors of Horatio Seymour if he were raised to the Presidency?

It is not necessary for Grant to speak The world knows his record by heart His history is the history of the country its victories over its enemies, the worst of enemies, traitors nurtured within its own bosom It is not necessary for Grant to speak The ballot box has spoken with trumpet voice, with no uncertain sound, for Grant, in a dozen States, from Maine to Colorado

Perhaps Seymour can change the 17 000 Republican majority in Ohio, and the 20 000 majority in Pennsylvania to zero by his spurious oratory Spurious oratory it is, for Seymour's forte lies only in mystifying his hearers, and involving them in the meshes of doubt and perplexity

You never can understand him He defies you to catch his meaning You have to confess that his perversions are half truths He maddens you by his demagogueism, and when you are on the point of admiring his candor, he constrains you to detest his hypocrisy The style is the man, a Jesuit in heart, and in intellect

Take an example. Peace is a blessing when a scourge And when one chants the praises of peace, and descants upon the horrors of war, no one can gainsay the justness of such sentiments But suppose the Government is assailed by traitors Is that man a patriot, or a friend to his country, who then prates of peace, of compromise who bids up taxes on to discourage the prosecution of the war for the Union to a successful termination? And yet this was what Seymour did Did Governor Andrew or Curtin, or Morton hold the draft to be unconstitutional? Did their patriotic speeches echo the echo of their words have died away, incite riots in Boston or Philadelphia, or indifference to the laws? And why is Seymour obnoxious to loyal sentiment of the country? Because as a leader of the Democratic party, he impressed his sentiments upon it, he gave the cue to that party, all over the land This gave him a power of mischief, and measured his responsibility Seymour has made too many speeches, for his own good and the party's Can he deny them or unsay them, or neutralize their effect? Can he change the platform on which he stands? Can he stop the mouth of Blair? Or stay the swords of the Ku Klux?

Why does he arraign Congress for what he calls a monstrous export tax of six cents a lb on cotton? He knows, or as a "statesman" ought to know, that it was only three cents He knows too that the entire tax was repealed eight months ago He says that the cotton tax was in the interest of the Eastern manufacturer Did not petroleum, our own product, pay an excise duty of one dollar a barrel on the crude, and twenty cents a gallon on the refined article, and was it not as much an article of export as cotton Were not all the taxes taken off from the industries of the nation as soon as the exigencies of the Treasury would admit of it, East, West, North and South? Seymour talks as hostile to the National Banking System Would any citizen like to go back to the old wildcat system of banking, when banks broke every day the country was flooded with counterfeit bank notes, and there was no end to "shaving" and depreciation Taxation is a favorite hobby with Seymour, yet he knows that neither manufactures or farms, or the necessaries of life are taxed, that only incomes above a competence and luxuries are made to contribute But does Government give nothing in return? Is protection in our rights worth nothing? Finally, Mr Seymour is shocked at the extravagance and corruption of the Republican party On this head we will adopt the eloquent the unanswerable language of the New York Evening Post, It says

"The Democratic leader demand that the people shall trust them with the general government and with the government of this State, and they found their demand upon vague promises of economy and purity of administration

Let the people judge what kind of administration, state and federal, we should have if the democratic leaders should get into power These men have the political ascendency here in this city Have they given us an economical or pure administration here? Have they put down corruption here? Have they lessened the taxes here? Have they put good men in offices here

Is it not notorious that the Democratic politicians who rule New York are the most corrupt, grasping and shameless in the country? They have increased the city's taxes year after year until a large part of our people are flying into the country to escape their rapacity They have wasted and stolen the people's money, in court house and other jobs, to the amount of millions of dollars They have put men of notoriously bad character in important offices year after year

And now they ask to be trusted with the State and national government Do they show any signs of repentance? Not one In the midst of their cry for purity of administration, a vast and deeper criminal attempt has been detected to corrupt the ballot box and defeat the will of the people, by the illiterate of fraudulent naturalization papers and these same Democratic leaders pay so little regard for the purity of our courts that they have renominated a judge against whom, as the whole country knows, charges of the most scandalous conduct are made."

HARPER'S, the last number, October 31st, should be in the hands of every Republican voter. Euler has it.

The Roberts Torpedo.

It would be superfluous, at this late day, to speak of the merits of the Roberts Torpedo from Tidioute to Scrubgrass, for the past three years, it has been in most successful operation, and has increased the production of petroleum in hundreds upon hundreds of wells to an extent which could hardly be overestimated Next to the discovery of oil, no invention has done more to enrich well owners, than the Roberts Torpedo Three years ago, Col Roberts, finding that Nitro glycerine was the most powerful explosive agent that could be employed in torpedoes, turned his attention to the manufacture of this compound, and established a factory near this city, under the direction of one of the most experienced chemists of this country But this enterprise was temporarily suspended as the article could be purchased much cheaper in the Eastern market Of late, however, this source of supply has been cut off, owing to the danger and insecurity attending its transportation and the Roberts Torpedo Company have again started a factory for the manufacture of Nitro Glycerine, upon an extensive scale, at a safe and convenient distance from the city The best machinery, with all the latest improvements by which the utmost safety is attained, is employed, and the manufacturing is conducted under the personal superintendence of Col E A Roberts On Friday last the new works were duly tested with the most satisfactory results, over a thousand pounds of acids and glycerine were mixed, making a large quantity of nitro glycerine, a portion of which has already, at present writing, been exploded in oil wells It is the intention of the Company to manufacture Nitro Glycerine for their own use exclusively, and in such quantities, as their orders may require—Their object is to have the article fresh when handled, thus diminishing the danger to agents and others from explosion The Company deserve great credit for the energy displayed by them in the erection of their extensive factory so soon after it had been demonstrated that Nitro Glycerine could not be shipped with safety by any Pendleton's agitator was not a stick of timber on the ground, now the factory is complete in all its parts and appointments, and of sufficient capacity to make a thousand pounds of Nitro Glycerine per day The Roberts Torpedo Company believe, from their experience during the past three years, that within the next six months, no oil operator can be permitted to use anything but Nitro Glycerine in old wells and that with the facilities they now enjoy, they will be able to meet the growing demand upon them for Nitro Glycerin Torpedoes in all parts of the oil region We understand that it is the purpose of Col Roberts, in connection with other gentlemen owning the exclusive right to manufacture and use Nitro Glycerine under Nobel's Patent to erect during the ensuing winter or early spring an establishment for the manufacture of the same, on the Lake Shore at some convenient point for the supplying of the missing districts of Lake Superior with Nitro Glycerine

Explosion of a Barque Loaded with Petroleum

On Sunday evening last the barque L H Cotton, bound from Cleveland to Liverpool, was set on fire and destroyed by an explosion of the petroleum of which her cargo partly consisted The following account of the disaster is condensed from the Cleveland Herald's report of it

The barque L H Cotton Captain George De Wolf cleared from the port of Cleveland, and sailed for her port of destination at twenty minutes past five o'clock Sunday evening According to her manifest there were on board 1 461 barrels of crude petroleum (or naptha) 440 barrels of oil of petroleum the value of which was set down at $13 428 Besides the above there were 17 700 staves and 1 100 hoops of the value of $1 610 the aggregate value of the cargo being $14 038 as made out at the Custom House The spirits and oil were shipped by Thomas Walton and the boat owned by F Shaw The whole cargo was consigned to Messrs Cunningham Shaw & Co Liverpool

The crew consisted of the captain two mates steward and six seamen The captain's wife was also on board making eleven persons in all

Mr Wm Somer, one of the seamen states that the force of the explosion was terrific It commenced to be simultaneous fore and aft He was near the forecastle when the shock came, and was thrown several feet into the air, striking the deck with considerable force when he came down With the exception of quite a severe bruise on one arm he was not much injured He immediately made his way toward the cabin at the stern of the vessel and landed in getting the small boat into the water There was a sheet of flame pouring out of the hatchways at this time and everything was in confusion He thinks the explosion took place about twenty minutes to seven o'clock, when the vessel was some three miles from port They had just cut loose from the tug that towed them out of the harbor, and had the sails all set for the voyage

As soon as possible the boat was lowered Mrs DeWolf was put into it followed by the officers and crew It was found that one of the seamen named Wm Hearns had been blown over board by the force of the explosion They put out in search of him and soon had him on board They started for port and when about half way in were met by the tug Prideville which put out to the burning vessel as soon as the alarm was given The crew was transferred to the tug and brought into port

As remarkable and miraculous as it may seem there were no lives lost Nearly all on board were more or less injured

The explosion could not be accounted for as there were no lights near the petroleum

Seymour's Question and Blair's Answer.

In his speech at Rochester, October 1st Gov Seymour, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency asks the following questions

"Suppose the people of the United States see fit to elect a Democratic President and Vice President, what then? Is your government changed? Do we hold unqualified power?—Could we make war? Could we control the legislation of the country? What will our powers be under the laws as they now stand?

Gen Blair, the Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, had already announced the answer in his Broadhead letter of June 30th

"If the President elected by the Democracy enforces or permits others to enforce those reconstruction acts the recreants by the accession of twenty spurious Southern votes and fifty Representatives will control both branches of Congress, and his administration will be powerless with one of Mr Johnson"

"There is but one way to restore the Government and the Constitution, and that is for the President elect to declare these acts null and void compel the army to end its usurpations, allow the white people to reorganize their own governments and elect Senators and Representatives"

Seymour asks "what could a Democratic President do if elected?" Blair answers "Inaugurate a civil war"

"The Old Folks"

Editors Morning Herald

I understand that our highly esteemed and well known fellow citizen, Mr James P Birch is expecting to leave this city in a few weeks to make his future home in Boston I also learn that there is to be a reunion of the Old Folks for a supper, ride, etc Now is one of the hundreds of citizens who heard the excellent music last winter, and to whom our city is especially indebted, I want to know if "Father Arnold" if going to leave without committing us to give himself and com, any a rousing benefit in Corinthian Hall, as a token of our appreciation of their charitable efforts last winter I hope not but trust that their modesty will not keep them from responding to the wishes of our citizens, any longer; but that we shall soon receive a reply to the invitation tendered them last winter announcing the time when we shall once more listen to the soul stirring "music of ye olden time." Ætna Life Insurance Company of Hartford Connecticut.

(Communicated)

TITUSVILLE, Pa, Oct. 27, 1868.

Editors Morning Herald:

At the commencement of 1863, the number of insured lives in this country numbered about 60 000 Of these, less than 1,000, or one sixteenth were insured in the Ætna Now there are over 4 0,000 insured, of which the Ætna has nearly 45 000, or one tenth The growth of this Company since the beginning of 1861, is shown by the following table

Date	Insured	Annual Income	Net Assets
1861	8[illegible]	$79,558 01	$1,[illegible] 05 05

1867	16 [illegible]	1,[illegible]447 4	7 358 612 35

Since January 1st, 1868, it has issued over 1 200 policies per month Its receipts have been over half a million per month, while its assets have increased to over eleven millions This rapid and unexampled progress has been attained in the face of the most energetic and unscrupulous competition ever experienced and at a saving of over $[illegible] 000 in the last three years over the average losses and expenses of the twenty largest Life Insurance Companies in America, as is shown by the following statement compiled from the New York Insurance Superintendent's reports of expenses and claims paid out of each $100 of income

	1865	1866	1867	3 year average
Average of 20 Cos	$[illegible] 11	$13 51	$[illegible]	$[illegible]

A total saving by the Ætna in 3 years over the average of the other 19 Cos, of				$735,964 97

Relying upon its own merits, the Ætna procures its business without assailing other companies, and while encouraging honorable competition, asks every policy holder and friend of life insurance, to remember that those who treat rivals fairly, are most likely to deal justly by their customers The Ætna has, in all its dealings, helpful accommodations, promptitude of payment of losses, and adoption of every practical and scientific improvement, always proved the true, faithful and zealous friend of the insured The people have tried it and found it their best friend and they therefore flock to it and stand by it in spite of all gainsayers More now intrust the future destiny of their families to its protection in a single fortnight than used a short time ago to insure in it during a whole year, and this confidence and enthusiasm in its favor is every day augmenting in every part of the Union Of this fact the twelve thousand new policies it has issued, and the income of over five millions dollars it has received during the current year, afford the most conclusive evidence While it has kept its faith inviolate with its members in all points and in the matter of dividends has returned to them the surplus as stipulated, and by economy of management, careful selection of risks and productive investments, has been able to do so in as large a measure as any and larger than most companies which can estimate the suffering and want which would have been among the widows and orphans of its policy holders but for the timely relief it has furnished in promptly distributing among them hundreds of thousands of dollars It is doing a great work and has gained a noble grand, and unparalleled triumph in its honorable and successful advancement from a company of less than one thousand members in 1861, to one of nearly 45 000 in 1868—from a company with an income of less than one hundred thousand dollars, to one of over six millions Such a company is the Ætna, and with such unexampled success well deserves the admiration it has won of the whole insurance world, and the high position it holds among the first life companies of the age
